

Veterans Day 2012

By Helen Gow

Armistice Day, traditionally observed on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, is now Veterans Day, a federal holiday to honor all veterans who served our country. That date was first observed in 1919. At the 11th hour, parades were halted, businesses closed and traffic stopped while the nation paused for a moment of silence.

By 1938, before we were involved in World War II, Congress made Armistice Day a federal holiday. It was observed by many states but was not a national holiday because the federal government can only designate holidays for its own workers. Individual states must recognize their own legal holidays and usually follow the federal lead.

There was no armistice or negotiations for peace at the close of World War II because unconditional surrender of the axis countries was the only acceptable end to hostilities.

VE Day, victory in Europe, began to happen on May 7, 1945, when the Act of Military Surrender was signed in Reims, France. It was ratified in Berlin on May 8, but the occupying German forces in the Channel Islands did not surrender until May 9.

VJ Day, victory over Japan, didn't come until August. News of the surrender broke on August 14, but the surrender wasn't announced until August 15. That war officially ended with the formal signing ceremony on September 2, 1945.

Whether the end of the war was actually given a name or not, a huge and immediate victory celebration rang out across the country at 7 p.m., on August 14, 1945, when President Truman made the announcement that it was over.

It wasn't until 1953 when Alfred King, from Emporia, Kansas, an active War Dad of America, campaigned to turn November 11 into an observance honoring all veterans. All was the key word because previous to that the observance applied only to World War I veterans. A year later, on May 26, 1954, President Dwight Eisenhower signed it into law. The holiday included every veteran who had served this country. That date later changed in accordance with the Uniform Monday Holiday Act but, by popular demand, was moved right back to the original one.

The demand for the change of date was popular and far reaching because the observance included veterans of all our wars. It also implies respect for serving and rewards. The practice of rewards goes back to the Romans and Greeks with land grants and money.

Veterans' benefits started in this country in 1636 for those serving the Plymouth Colony. Men who were disabled or injured would be maintained by the colony for life. In 1776, during the early years of the Republic, states paid medical and hospital care for the disabled. The first federal facility was founded in 1811 and in the early 19th century benefits were extended. By the end of the Mexican War, veterans were numbered in the hundred thousands.

The greatest losses occurred during the Civil War with 1.9 million Union Army veterans on the federal rolls. There were slightly fewer from the Confederate side, but they didn't fight for the Union. It wasn't until 1958, after President Eisenhower recognized all veterans, that Confederate soldiers were pardoned and pensions given to those still alive.

Five million veterans returned from WWI. In 1917 Congress extended benefits to include insurance for active duty personnel and vocational rehab. This was the forerunner of the Department of Veterans Affairs which continued to expand.

In 1944, President Roosevelt signed the GI Bill of Rights, guaranteeing mortgages and making higher education available and accessible to all veterans. It was the most extensive benefit since the Homestead Act of 1812. The GI Bill, a thanks to our veterans, also turned into a huge benefit to everyone by changing the socio-economic condition of the United States.

Memorial Days

For a while, he aimed toward being a doctor
And chemistry sorted him out
He thought he avoided the worst of the Army
When he joined the Naval reserves
He would muster out after graduating
To become a Naval Corpsman
Supporting Marines in the field
Even worse than the Army

But Grace was with him
He was older than most of the "boys"
Became a Petty Officer 2nd Class
He stayed out of the field
Putting the boys back together again
In the hospital on Guam
Putting the boys back together again
He remembers dress whites, shorts, long socks
Incredible beaches and mitt-sized land crabs
Stinging rock fish that could kill you
Lush greens and geckos and dune buggies
And putting the boys back together again
He remembers the C-141s
Ferrying in the worst of the wounded
The ships bringing the less so
The emergency calls to duty stations
The boys who wouldn't cry
And the boys who couldn't
Putting the boys back together again
He never stepped on Vietnam's soil
But was on a ship that carried the boys to Guam
Flying in the worst of the wounded
And putting the boys back together again

Now, in shows that are too graphic
In interviews that talk to the times
"Back in the day..."

He cries
Memorial Day
Veterans Day
He remembers the boys
And putting the boys back together again
He remembers no successes only failures
The boys he couldn't put together again

And I hold him and share his tears
And think about the boys who wish
They could remember the name
Of the Corpsman who saved their life
The Corpsman who put them back together again
